Roadmap, Training Matrix and Survey Preparation

What to do, in what order, and how to rehearse for the survey

DRAFT - the CARF section map behind this document has NOT been checked against the purchased manual. Set manual_verified: true before use.

Target survey: 2027-06
Generated 2026-09-05

The 12-Month Roadmap to Survey

The single most important rule: CARF wants to see that you have been doing this, not that you wrote it last week. Most manuals require the program to have been in operation and generating records for a minimum period before survey, and expect to see data trends and a completed annual analysis. Confirm the exact minimum in your purchased manual and in the CARF Survey Application, then count backwards from there. Everything below assumes a 12-month runway.

Documentation required for every training: topic, date, duration, trainer name AND qualification, curriculum or outline, and the signature of each attendee. A sign-in sheet with no trainer qualification is a common finding.

Mock Survey Interview Guide

Run this as a real rehearsal at least 60 days before the survey. Have someone who does not work in the program ask the questions. Write down the actual answers. Any answer that is a shrug, a guess, or "I'd have to ask the director" is a gap — fix it with training, not with a script.

Tell every person the three rules before the survey:

1. Tell the truth. A surveyor can tell when you are performing.
2. "I don't know, but I know where to find it" is a good answer. Guessing is not.
3. Never say what you think they want to hear. Say what actually happens.

A. Interview with the Chief Executive Officer / leadership

1. Walk me through your organizational chart. Who is accountable for quality?
2. What does your strategic plan say, and what data did it come from?
3. When did the governing body last review performance? Show me the minutes.
4. What are your top three risks and what are you doing about each?
5. Show me your budget and the assumptions behind it. Who reconciles the bank statement?
6. What did last year's performance analysis tell you, and what changed because of it?
7. How do you know your staff are competent, not just trained?
8. Tell me about a complaint you received and what happened.
9. What is your biggest weakness as an organization right now?

B. Interview with the [FILL IN: Program Director name]

1. Describe the program. Who is it for and what do you actually do?
2. How long from referral to first contact? How do you know?
3. What happens to someone you cannot serve?
4. What is your caseload cap and how did you decide on it?
5. Show me how a person-centered plan gets made. Who writes the goals?
6. How do you know notes are done on time?
7. What happens after a critical incident?
8. How do you handle it when a peer specialist knows a participant from their own recovery community?
9. What happens when someone just stops showing up?

C. Interview with Peer Support Specialists (the most important interview)

1. What is peer support? What is it not?
2. What makes you qualified for this job?
3. How often do you get supervision, and what do you talk about?
4. Give me an example of when you shared your own story. Why did you share it?
5. What would you do if a participant asked you something you are not qualified to answer?
6. What do you do if someone tells you they stopped taking their medication?
7. You are at a home visit and you feel unsafe. Exactly what do you do?
8. Someone escalates in your car. What do you do?
9. You see a participant at your own recovery meeting. What now?
10. A participant sends you a friend request. What do you do?
11. Where are the emergency procedures? What do you do in a fire here?
12. Who do you report a suspected abuse situation to, and how fast?
13. How do you know what a participant's goal is?
14. How do you take care of yourself in this job? Does the agency help?
15. If you had a concern about the agency, who would you tell? What if it was about your boss?

D. Interview with persons served

Never coach answers. Ask people who will speak freely, including people who have complained.

1. How did you get connected here?
2. How long did you wait?
3. Did someone explain your rights? Do you have a copy?
4. If you had a complaint, what would you do? Who would you call?
5. Would anything bad happen to you if you complained?
6. Whose goals are on your plan? Who picked them?
7. Can you show me your plan? Are those your words?
8. Can you say no to something here?
9. Has anyone pressured you about medication or about how you do your recovery?
10. Where do you meet your peer specialist?
11. What has changed in your life since you started?
12. Is there anything you needed that they could not help with?
13. Do you know what happens when services end?

E. Interview with the Supervisor

1. How do you assess competency? Have you ever watched someone deliver service?
2. How often do you supervise, and what is documented?
3. How do you supervise self-disclosure?
4. What do you do when a boundary problem comes up?
5. What have you found in record reviews and what did you do about it?
6. What do you do when a staff member is struggling with their own recovery?

F. Document requests to expect

Have these physically ready in the Evidence Binder before day one.

- Referral log, waitlist log, referral-out log

- 4 quarters of record reviews + corrective action tracker + summary reports
- Records retention schedule + certificates of destruction

G. The five questions that most often expose a gap

1. "Show me the data." Policies are easy. Four quarters of real data is not.
2. "What did you do about it?" Finding a problem is half. Closing it is the standard.
3. "How did the people you serve find out?" Distribution of results is the most-missed requirement in Section 1.N.

4. "Show me the drill on the evening shift." Drills usually cover one shift only.

5. "Read me a goal in the person's own words." Goals written by staff, in staff language, are the most common Section 2.C finding.

Evidence Binder Index

One tab per standard area. On survey day the surveyor names an area; you hand them that tab. Build this as you go, not in the last month.

Leadership is identified, accountable, and ethical. There is a written code of ethics, a way to raise concerns without retaliation, a corporate compliance program, and evidence that leadership considers cultural competency and the needs of the people served when making decisions.

Surveyor will ask: (1) How long between the referral and the first contact? Prove it. (2) Show me a signed orientation checklist in a record. (3) What do you do when someone does not meet criteria?

Tab 2.C — Person-Centered Plan

Each person has an individualized plan built with them, in their own words, reflecting their strengths, needs, abilities and preferences, with goals and measurable objectives, the specific services and who provides them, target dates, and the person's signature. The plan is reviewed on a stated schedule and updated when things change.

Tab 2.D — Transition/Discharge

Transition planning begins at admission, not at the end. There is a written transition/discharge summary for every person who leaves, including unplanned exits, and a documented attempt at follow-up after discharge with the results recorded and analyzed.

Tab 2.E — Medication Use

If the program does not prescribe, dispense, administer, or store medication, that must be stated in writing, and staff must know their limits and what to do about medication questions and adverse reactions. If it does any of those things, a full medication management policy set is required.

Tab 2.F — Nonviolent Practices

A written commitment to nonviolent practice: de-escalation training for staff, what is prohibited, what to do in a behavioral crisis, when to call for help, and a debriefing with the person served and staff after any crisis event.

Tab 2.G — Records of the Persons Served

A written list of what belongs in a record, who may write in it, how quickly entries must be made, how corrections are made, how records are secured, how long they are kept, and how they are destroyed. Entries are legible, dated, and signed with credential.

Tab 2.H — Quality Record Review

Tab 3.CI — Community Integration

The program helps people participate in community life as they choose - housing, work, education, benefits, relationships, transportation, recreation, health care, and civic life. It is built on the person's own goals, uses natural supports and real community settings rather than segregated ones, and measures actual community participation, not just service contacts.

Tab 3.PEER — Peer Workforce Requirements (cross-cutting)

Peer support is a WORKFORCE and a service model, not a separate CARF program section. Its requirements are enforced through 1.I (credential, competency, supervision), 2.A (program description and staffing), 2.C (person-centered planning done WITH the person), and the Section 3 program. This area exists so nothing peer-specific falls between the cracks: lived experience as a job qualification, the state peer credential, self-disclosure boundaries, mutuality, dual-relationship management in small recovery communities, peer staff wellness, and career ladder.
